A retired high school English teacher who now works exclusively editing/formatting dissertations. She currently lives in New York so she works via e-mail and phone. Her fee is $4/page and she offers to do an initial consultation/edit of 3 pages for $10, so that students can get an idea of what she is able to do to help them and then decide whether they think working with her would be worthwhile. Reach out to her via email to discuss your needs and timeline. She is up-to-date with APA 7th edition and the UNLV Graduate College formatting guidelines.

Monique Matute-Chavarria, Ph.D.

She received her Ph.D. in the Department of Early Childhood, Multilingual, and Special Education from UNLV in 2020. While at UNLV, she served as a Rodman Graduate Teaching Assistant and Holmes Scholar for the College of Education. She was also selected as a fellow for the Hammill Institute on Disabilities and served as editorial assistant for Intervention in School and Clinic, the practitioner journal associated with Hammill. Following graduation, she transitioned to an editorial board member of Intervention in School and Clinic. Additionally, while at UNLV, she received a UNLV Summer Research Fellowship Award and most recently won the 2020 American Association of Colleges Teacher Education (AACTE) Dissertation Funding Competition at the annual conference. She passed IRB and the graduate college review the first time with no revisions. She is currently an assistant professor at New Mexico State University. She is available via phone, email, and Zoom. Her fee is $25/hour and she offers an initial consultation/edit for $50, as long as it does not exceed 2 hours of work.
