

J.D.-Focused 54-Credit Ph.D. in Curriculum and Instruction in the Cultural Studies, International Education, and Multicultural Education (CSIEME) Concentration Sub-Plan

This 54-credit J.D.-focused-Ph.D. in Curriculum and Instruction (C&I) in the Cultural Studies, International Education, and Multicultural Education (CSIEME) concentration sub-plan in the Department of Teaching and Learning (T&L) (hereafter also referred to as the “54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. program” or the “CSIEME Ph.D.”) is geared for scholar-practitioner-activists interested in concurrently (and in some cases, consecutively) earning a Ph.D. and a J.D. in order to advance social change at the intersections of law and education and through educational justice (e.g., Social Justice Legal/Education, Analysis of the School-to-Prison Pipeline, Restorative Justice Practices in Schools and Communities) and education-related legal advocacy (e.g., Immigration Law, Family Justice Clinic, Community Law). With these degrees in hand, graduates will be prepared for variety of career opportunities including, but not limited to, as community- and school-based legal advocates, Civil Rights lawyers, public service-minded legislators, diversity-focused PK-12 and higher educational administrators, educational equity policy analysts, faculty in cultural and Ethnic Studies, critical multicultural education, and related disciplines, and as community-embedded educational activist-scholars.

Students admitted to the 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. program, and to a J.D. program (at UNLV or, potentially, elsewhere) may pursue both degrees concurrently (and in some cases, consecutively). Pursued individually, the J.D. degree (at UNLV) requires the completion of 89 credit hours, and the “non-J.D.-focused CSIEME Ph.D.” degree (formally known as the T&L 60-credit Ph.D. program in C&I in the CSIEME concentration sub-plan) requires the completion of a minimum of 60 credit hours. This J.D.-focused CSIEME Ph.D. program requires the completion of 80 Law J.D. credit hours (at UNLV) and 54 CSIEME Ph.D. credit hours (9 hours of the CSIEME Ph.D. courses will be accepted toward the J.D. degree (at UNLV), and 6 hours of Law J.D. courses will be accepted toward the CSIEME Ph.D. degree program).

Admission

New applicants must apply for, and gain admission to, both the Boyd School of Law J.D. program (or another J.D. program) and to the 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. program. Admission requirements are the same as those listed under the regular J.D. (at UNLV or elsewhere) and for the “non-J.D.-focused CSIEME Ph.D.” Contact the William S. Boyd School of Law and the Department of Teaching and Learning/CSIEME program for further information on admissions requirements.

More specifically, students can be admitted to the 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. program in three ways:

- 1) have already completed a J.D. from an accredited law school;
- 2) be already-admitted to law school (including the William S. Boyd School of Law); or,
- 3) be concurrently applying to law school (including the William S. Boyd School of Law).

Applicants from current students in either a J.D. or the “non-J.D.-focused CSIEME Ph.D.” program will be considered as well. These students must apply for, and gain admission to whichever program they are not currently enrolled in.

Students who are already admitted to, or who are concurrently applying to, law school must have completed or must complete one year of law school coursework before beginning Ph.D. coursework. UNLV’s William S. Boyd School of Law does not award credit for any class taken before matriculation. Accordingly, 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. students who are pursuing their J.D. at UNLV are required to enroll at the Boyd School of Law and complete one year of study before taking any Ph.D. courses.

Application Process

To apply for the J.D.-focused 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. program, all materials required for the Ph.D. and all materials required for the J.D. must have been/be submitted in the usual fashion for both degree programs. See UNLV Law School application information here. Application to the 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. goes through the UNLV Graduate College Gateway system accessible from here.

Degree Requirements

J.D./Ph.D. candidates who subsequently decide to pursue only the J.D. or Ph.D. must complete the solely selected degree program in its entirety subject to the same rules and requirements as the students not pursuing the J.D./Ph.D.

J.D./Ph.D. candidates must comply with the requirements for all students regarding the maximum amount of time for completion of a degree program. At UNLV, the maximum for fulltime day-division students to complete requirements for the J.D. degree is 5 years; the maximum period for part-time, evening division students to complete requirements for a J.D. degree is 6 years. The UNLV Graduate College imposes a 6-year time limit for completion of a Ph.D. (though, through an appeal process, students may request additional time if they have shown good progress toward completion).

In consultation with their advisor/committee chair, 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. students must organize a dissertation committee of at least two faculty members in the Department of Teaching and Learning, including a chair from the CSIEME concentration area, and one faculty member from the Law School (with doctoral committee member Graduate Faculty Status in the Department of Teaching and Learning). In addition, a fourth member from outside the department, known as the Graduate College Representative, is also required. An additional committee members may be added at the student’s and their committee chair’s discretion.

For 54-credit CSIEME Ph.D. students who are pursuing their J.D. at UNLV, student honors and class ranks at the William S. Boyd School of Law will be computed based solely on law coursework.
