

UNLV Human Research Resources Center

ORI-HS has launched a new (2023) resource center for UNLV researchers conducting human research; the center is housed in UNLV's WebCampus, and contains a variety of resources.

The resource center will have new content added to it over time, including content on Cayuse navigation, and webinar recordings and materials.

To access the resource center, UNLV researchers must "self-enroll" in the WebCampus Organization. To self-enroll in the WebCampus organization, first follow the self-enrollment link.

After clicking the link, users will be prompted to click the "Enroll in Course" button. Once that is complete, users can click the "Go to Course" button to be taken directly to the resource center immediately. In the future, the resource center can be found on a user's individual WebCampus dashboard, which is visible to users upon logging into WebCampus. The name of the resource center in WebCampus is ORI: UNLV IRB and Human Research Protection Program. Click on that "course" on the dashboard to be taken to the resource center.

Have feedback on the resource center? Email nyssa.towsley@unlv.edu to provide your thoughts and suggestions.